This event brings together Sami studies scholar Harald Gaski and Native American literature scholar Samantha Majhor to discuss indigenous literatures and decolonization in Norwegian and Minnesotan contexts. How have indigenous literatures been and continue to be important sites of cultural memory and resilience against ongoing histories of settler colonialism? Director of Race and Ethnic Studies Jennifer Kwon Dobbs will moderate the conversation.

This discussion is sponsored by the Leraas Interdisciplinary Endowment, with support from the Norwegian Dept. and Race and Ethnic Studies.
