SUMMER 2010 – AUSTRIA

The program consists of a combination of lectures by Upper Austria University of Applied Sciences School of Social Work faculty, contact with professionals in social work and criminal justice, and service site visits. Students may study in the areas of social work and/or criminal justice. Special emphasis will be on substance abuse, family counseling, child welfare, prisons, and policing, especially as these relate to issues of international immigration. Within each of these broad areas, students will choose to focus on a particular topic in order to compare an aspect of the Austrian system to a comparable concept in the US. All students will hear lectures on European social policy, issues of immigration and crime, historical background on the Nazi era, and responses to family violence and substance abuse. Students are required to attend all lectures, site visits, and write a paper reflecting their work. Students will earn 6 undergraduate or graduate credits in Social Work or Criminal Justice.

Financial Aid, Scholarships & Grants can be used for this program!

SUMMER 2010 – BRISTOL, ENGLAND

UWM and The Helen Bader School of Social Welfare have been coordinating this 2-week study abroad course for the past 14 years. UWM students join the course in U.S. – U.K. Comparative Public Policy in Bristol, England. The program consists of a combination of lectures by English faculty from the University of Bristol and professionals in social work and criminal justice, site visits, and assignment to a UK research advisor for individual academic assistance. Students may study in the areas of child welfare, criminal justice, health policy, aging, and family violence. The course examines comparative US and UK approaches to child protection, juvenile justice, and social services in both theory and practice. Students will analyze and evaluate strategies for preventative and community-based services through interdisciplinary dialogue and a combination of classroom lectures and site visits. Students will earn 6 undergraduate or graduate credits in Social Work or Criminal Justice.

SUMMER 2010 – COSTA RICA

The increased immigration of Latin Americans and their subsequent integration into North American society are increasing demands on American social service systems. This factor, coupled with the need for cultural sensitivity, has led to a rapidly growing need for Spanish language competent social workers with an in-depth understanding of Latin American culture.

The Helen Bader School of Social Welfare is initiating a broad-based strategy for expanding Wisconsin's pool of culturally and linguistically competent social work students by directly recruiting native Spanish speakers to our academic programs, and expanding both Service-Learning and Field Placement opportunities for students working with Spanish Speaking clients. The opportunity to study in a Spanish speaking country is an excellent way to improve language skills and cultural awareness, as well as to stimulate learner motivation.

The purpose of this 2-week on-site immersion course is to facilitate acquisition of basic, practical skills in conversational Spanish.

Please visit the Helen Bader School of Social Welfare for more information: <http://www4.uwm.edu/hbssw/>.
