Jasper Ridge Biological Preserve: A Living Laboratory for Discovery and Learning

Monday, 11/9
3:30 pm
Carleton College
Olin 141

Jorge Ramos

Executive Director, Jasper Ridge Biological Preserve, Stanford University

Jasper Ridge Biological Preserve (‘Ootchamin ‘Ooyakma) is Stanford University’s research station, which has protected 1,190 acres of Santa Cruz Mountains foothills since 1973. In this seminar, Jorge will show how Jasper Ridge carries out its mission to contribute to the understanding of the Earth’s natural systems through research, education, and protection and stewardship of the preserve’s resources.